Teachers who know more about pedagogy tend to be less stressed and make better use of class time.

This is one of the findings from the OECD Teacher Knowledge Survey, published in April 2026, which measured teachers' knowledge of teaching and learning across eight participating countries. The findings suggest that pedagogical knowledge not only supports better student learning outcomes but also helps teachers navigate work-related challenges and potentially improve their professional well-being.

These findings underscore the importance of investing in teachers' pedagogical competence through meaningful, relevant, and evidence-based professional development opportunities.

In response to this need, the seminar-workshops will feature evidence-based teaching practices and sharing of actual classroom experiences by education practitioners who apply the principles of the science of learning. The sessions seek to bridge the gap between educational research and classroom practice by helping teachers understand not only what works in teaching but also why and how it works.

This professional development initiative is aligned with DepEd Order No. 42, s. 2017, or the National Adoption and Implementation of the Philippine Professional Standards for Teachers (PPST), particularly Domain 1, Strand 1.2, which emphasizes research-based knowledge and principles of teaching and learning. It also supports the principles of collaborative professional learning and continuous improvement espoused in DepEd Order No. 35, s. 2016.

Through longtime classroom teachers-led discussions, practical demonstrations, reflective activities, and professional exchanges, teachers will be equipped with research-informed instructional and assessment strategies that they can adapt to their respective classroom contexts.

Ultimately, the seminar-workshops aim to empower teachers to make informed pedagogical decisions, maximize instructional time, respond effectively to diverse learning needs, and improve learning outcomes while promoting their own professional well-being.

Relevant PPST strands
- Strand 1.2: Research-based knowledge and principles of teaching and learning
- Strand 4.4: Professional collaboration to enrich teaching practice
- Strand 5.5: Use of assessment data to enhance teaching and learning practices and programs
- Strand 7.3: Professional links with colleagues
- Strand 7.4: Professional reflection and learning to improve practice

The activity is intended for teachers, school principals, guidance associate, and other education professionals from public and private schools nationwide. Participation shall be voluntary, and the conduct of the activity shall not disrupt classes or official school activities.

In this regard, we respectfully seek the issuance of a DepEd Advisory to disseminate information about the summit to interested educators and schools nationwide.
