GLOBAL PEACE LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE 2022

December 1-3, 2022, Widus Hotel Clark, Pampanga

TRANSFORMING EDUCATION FORUM

Theme: "Transforming Education for a Flourishing Civilization"

Our world has been changing rapidly and in unpredictable ways. The Covid19 pandemic only exacerbated the challenge of reimagining education to ensure that students are future-ready and future-proof. Educators and school leaders must rethink ways to prepare the next generation for the future, thus transforming education for a flourishing civilization.

To navigate this myriad of challenges, students must be well-grounded in character, moral leadership, and ethics while simultaneously provided with opportunities to develop their creative ingenuity to propel humanity forward. These leaders would then work to build ethical, peaceful societies of steady and sustainable economic growth and shared prosperity.

Transforming Education Forum Opening Ceremony "Transforming Education for a Flourishing Civilization"

Our world has pressing problems that need solutions.

Join us to hear from innovative educational thought leaders to share their perspectives on the essential competencies and changes needed in education to ensure that students have the capacity to positively impact their lives, work, communities, and world.

In this session, thought leaders will explore new trends, ideas, policies, and innovations to prepare students to be successful in all aspects of their lives and have the agency to contribute to building flourishing societies.

12:00 – 1:30 PM (Lunch Break / Networking / Visit Exhibit Hall)

1:30 – 3:00 PM

Session 1

The Foundations of Character, Creativity, and Mindset

Nurturing character, creativity, and mindset are essential competencies in education to ensure students can positively contribute to their work, communities, nation, and world.

Educators will need to expose their students to experiential models that nurture good character, integrity, universal principles, and shared values for students to be competent in applying the knowledge and skills for the greater good and benefit of humanity.

Explore what future education systems, schools, and classrooms can look like and the approaches that great educational leaders are pioneering in raising the total child.

Session 2: Breakout Discussions

Focused group discussions building on Opening Ceremony and Session 1 insights

In acknowledging the growing need to develop new and innovative methods to teach and nurture character, creativity, and mindset in school settings, it is necessary to find new ways to share, question, and learn from innovative, experimental models.

Educators must transform themselves, their schools, and classrooms to be inviting and engaging for every student.

This session will explore the role of character, creativity, and mindset in building the kind of school environment conducive to education for the whole person who contributes to flourishing schools, communities, and the world.

8:00 – 9:45 AM

Session 3

The Power of Moral and Innovative Leadership

The pandemic has underscored the need for readiness in online access, quality of education, and well-being of students and teachers. The need for moral and innovative leadership has never been more pertinent as educators rethink ways to prepare their students for the world of automation, artificial intelligence, the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR), climate change, and social issues related to inequality and connecting beyond differences.

The moral orientation focuses on promoting a “greater good” that can benefit not just the individual; but the larger society, nation, and eventually, the world. The corresponding side of innovative leadership harnesses humankind’s natural creative need to advance and develop the human condition and explore fresh and creative ideas to solve the many problems of our time.

Examined will be the reinforcing ecosystem approach of the home, school, and community in advancing a consistent and reinforcing perspective that exemplifies moral and innovative leadership.

Session 4

Strengthening Education Stakeholders’ Capacity

Rapid changes in technology and globalization are drastically changing jobs and society. Nevertheless, education systems, having remained mostly stagnant, are largely inadequate to meet the demands of our present and future world.

New inputs are necessary for education systems to be relevant. These inputs will require a sense of urgency in creating new collaborative, cross-sector partnerships and ecosystems that actively engage the government, the private sector, civil society, and others to invest in future-ready education systems and policies.

The outcome is students who are equipped for the new world of work, responsible and engaged members of society, resulting in sustainable growth, peace, and positive global impact.

Session 5: Breakout Discussions

Focused group discussions building on Session 3 & 4 and Main Plenary insights

To substantially complement the work of moral and innovative development, what knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values will today's learners need to thrive and shape their future?

Equally important is teacher profiling of competencies – attitudes and values, knowledge, and skills – to effectively support students' learning and well-being.

How can instructional systems effectively develop these knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values?
