A Paradoxical Reality

Raine Averie M. Victoria

Grade 6-SSES

San Miguel Elementary School

San Miguel South District

Our world is a paradise in a battlefield. We live in a paradoxical sphere, where we revel in the beauty and pleasures of life. We face the endless fight, pain, and disappointment. As we traverse to search for our true existence, we witness the goodness in people, but also the atrocities committed by them. And of a million stories, this is the tale of our conflicting society. In our world where money talks, those who have it wield power over those who do not, and the rich only get richer, while the poor are left to be saddled in indigence The pursuit of knowledge has become a luxury, reserved for the privileged few who could afford it.

The true power of journalism lies in its ability to give students a resounding voice. It serves as a catalyst for raising awareness of pressing issues in our country, igniting discussions that pave way for positive change. Journalists possess the unique ability to illuminate stories that may otherwise remain hidden, providing a platform for marginalized voices and perspectives. Campus Journalists offer a glimmer of hope; they are the ray of hope, tirelessly striving to illuminate our society. Undoubtedly, young writers are the beacon of light in a civilization that longs for truth and enlightenment. They are the voice for those who have been silenced, and the eyes for those who cannot see.

Filipinos, the youth are living in a world fraught with complexities and contradictions that can often leave us feeling lost in darkness and cramped spaces, but journalists will not give up. They will keep on believing that even in the darkest times, there will always be the promise of light waiting to burst. We must continue to fight, strive for a better world, and hold on to the paradise that exists amidst the chaos, because— Our world is a paradise in a battlefield with millions of stories, and as a campus journalist, this is the story that we live to tell in the real world, journalism. #
